Webinar to be held by ISM NJ.

ISM-New Jersey presents:

How to Manage International Trade Compliance Risks in a Routed Transaction

A routed export is whereby a foreign buyer elects the U.S. freight forwarder/agent to facilitate the export on the foreign buyer's behalf. There are nuances that are unique to routed exports. These nuances leave a door open for the shipper/USPPI to potentially be in violation of the Foreign Trade Regulations.

This information packed webinar is designed to present a comprehensive summary of the compliance concerns in a routed export transaction. This webinar will help participants in the preparation of their own internal compliance procedures related to routed export transactions.

The following points will be addressed:

- * What is a "routed" export transaction?
- * What regulations govern exports?
- * Who is responsible for export controls?
- * Am I the USPPI?
- * What role does the forwarder play?
- * Summary of main risks involved in routed exports
- * What are fines/penalties for non-compliance?
- * How can we become compliant?

Don't miss out on this opportunity to further your capabilities in bringing your company into full compliance with the Foreign Trade Regulations as it relates to routed export transactions.

About our Speaker:

Sarah Reynolds has over 25 years experience in the international logistics industry specializing in supply chain management to difficult and problematic countries worldwide.

During her employment at SDV USA she managed a department devoted towards the handling of United Nations related shipments and non-governmental organizations. She worked directly in assisting these agencies with their export and import needs by offering shipping solutions and expertise on export regulations to third world countries.

Early in her career at SDV, she also managed various types of commercial shipments which included aircraft parts, computer and electronic equipment, cosmetics and raw materials. Due to the nature of these commodities, part of her responsibilities was to provide support to her staff regarding U.S and international regulations, Incoterms, export licenses and letters of credit. Sarah was also the in house certified dangerous goods specialist.

Past accomplishments also included being part of an ISO quality team established to create and implement quality policies and procedures resulting in the certification of her employer at the time, USF Worldwide.

Sarah has also been involved with several organizations within the industry. In addition to the above companies, she has worked for Kuehne & Nagel, UTI and BDP where she was exposed to various aspects of the international transportation industry. For instance; project freight, worldwide bids and carrier negotiations, sales and customer service, compliance management, and network development.

Sarah has developed an expertise in assisting companies engaged in global trade in bettering their supply chain practices in areas such as freight negotiation, best practices, trade compliance, documentation, import and export regulations, and other related concerns.

Sarah is currently a Senior Consultant and Trainer at American River International's corporate office in New York.
